

Your Successful Season Starts Now

Your Successful Season Starts Now

As I sit Watching the Pro Football Hall of Fame enshrinement it means the beginning of football season and yes, the end of summer. As I listened to each enshrinement speech and enjoyed the stories of how they got to the pinnacle of greatness a few themes started to rise as a common among each speech.

No one gets there alone. They each thanked coaches, trainers, nutritionists, family, friends and mentors. What kind of support system have you assembled for your life?

Preparation and resilience. Always be prepared for what curveball life throws you, you will always have some form of adversity in your life, but the greats overcome those times thriving on the ability to fight and overcome those obstacles.

The importance of community and giving back. Fulfillment doesn't come only from doing more for ourselves. In fact, one of the most reliable ways to improve well-being and ease any stress you're feeling is to serve others. Acts of helping—whether at work, at home, or in our communities—create perspective, build resilience, and give our own goals greater meaning.

Humility and self-awareness along the way. Humility and self-awareness help you facilitate personal growth and are the cornerstone for developing authentic relationships. These two traits allow you to be honest about your strengths and weaknesses. Giving you the opportunity to surround yourself with those who can help you foster success.
